Prince George arrives to join in celebrating the Boys' Brigade Jubilee. ... Thirty-thousand lads from all parts of the world are honoured--

--by the Royal Visit. ... It is the fiftieth birthday of the brigade, but not of its members. ... They are ~~not~~ all-- --young in years, but with aims in life worthy of their elders. ...

Proudly the battalions march past the Prince, who could not help--

--being impressed by their smartness. Thirty-thousand--

--boys pledged to Obedience, Reverence, Discipline and Self-Respect! Rather wonderful in these days of so called "modern" youth!

The Brigade "looks after" the body as well as the mind; and the boys welcome the chance to-- --display their athletic ability before the royal visitor.

Their tableaux are quite professional in effect. ... One can't do better than close with, "Good Boys!"
