

THAT ELUSIVE MONSTER.

CAUGHT AT LAST !
THE REAL THING.

Picture:-

The Loch Ness monster ! Latest bulletin from our big game hunter who has now been put 'on the spot'. The monster has several humps, and he's so fed up he's growing extra humps every day. He's nine legs - - one for every day of the week - - and machinery for making special spoors.

This is a skeleton Brontosaurus, a mere dwarf against the recently discovered Loch Ness variety. Now here is-- --the actual Loch Ness monster itself. Authentic and real ! Caught off Inverness ! This is spoof, I mean, proof that it did exist once.

For years it has been lying in the Natural History Museum at Kensington. Hence the saying "Let sleeping monsters lie". They're great liars, anyway.
