

BACK TO WORK.

PROSPERITY TURNS THE CORNER.
BRIGHTER OUTLOOK IN INDUSTRY.

(EFFECT).

In his New Year's microphone interview the Prime Minister was optimistic about improving trade conditions.

We have been satisfying ourselves by revving round various industries. The people are going --

--back to work. Maybe it's at long last, but they--

--are going back. Miners are cutting thousands--

--more tons of coal to supply power stations with energy to--

--cope with growing demands. Every morning the clatter of feet--

--going to work gets louder and louder.

Foundries, which have been almost idle for years, are putting on--

--more and more men. Blast furnaces are spewing out their tons of molten--

--metal to supply the world's increasing calls for British steel. What better news--

--can a news-reel offer than this? We have been patient--

--a long time. Unemployed men and women have faced the dark times magnificently, and now the-- --dawn is at hand. The nearly rusty wheels of-- --industry are beginning to revolve. There's a good time coming, and not so far away.
