A BIG BLOW.

60-MILES-AN-HOUR GALE.
WINTER'S WORST STORM.
-England-

Picture.:-

England's shores have not escaped the gales--
--which have recently swept the world. Trawlers reading--
--weather signs and wireless warnings make for shelter-- --in the nearest harbours. The sea is on the-- --rampage. Coast resorts get a magnificent spectacle of some of the highest seas --
-within living memory. (EFFECT)

And the little dog barked to see such fun.

Few people did much laughing, but it's an ill wind -- --that blows anybody any good. Beach-combers searching the shores reaped a good harvest from the-- --misfortunes of others, and if any of this--
-belongs to you, claim it quick, or for never, hold your pieces.
