Along this road, La Marche des Dames - a ----- ---few days ago, a King drove. A King -----

--- admired and beloved by all his people. This erag he attempted to conquer but the erag conquered the King. Down this rugged hillside the beloved monarch crashed, killed by a hurtling rock-----

----- SILENT ( 4 feet) -----

-----The abandoned climbing gear remains a silent witness---

-----watching the fatal spot where a King,'s tortured body lies -----

-----helpless, gave up its soul. The rustling leaves were the only music which whispered over His Majesty as his corpse was borne back to a hushed, horrified----- stricken place of weeping men and women. Soon the populace had but one thought - to pay a -----

---last homage to their monarch, Albert, who was King of the Belgians. The Palace gates had to be frequently -----

-----closed and guarded, so great was the press of those who mourned. The silent procession seemed endless-----

-----As they passed before his body, many fell on their knees and frankly wept. He was a much loved King -----

-----To-morrow the King will make his last journey through the streets of his ---

---capital, to the Church of St. Gudule-----

---a Lion at Laeken is symbolic of the King's strength in his country's service.
