OIL IN ENGLAND:

RUMOURS OF GREAT DISCOVERY.
GOVERNMENT MOVES.

-Derbyshire-

Picture.:-

Derbyshire has struck oil. Everybody in the sleepy town of Castleton is digging furiously in his cabbage patch--

--hoping to tap a gusher and flood the main street with oil--

--shares. The Church collection plate expects to put on weight,--

--too. Amateur prospectors are surveying the Man Tor Hill which is suspected of being rich--

--in oil shale. Experts' reports are said to be enthusiastic, and the Government--

--is keeping a watchful eye on what may be a new source of income. Wells are being sunk in the hope that oil will rise. And if Derbyshire--

--is proved to be well oiled, everything will be cheery.
