From Newgate Prison to Tyburn was once a noted walk, but--

--few made the return journey from Tyburn to Newgate,--

--for the walk's end was the gallows. Holborn, passed on the way--

--and Southampton Row sees a procession of Roman Catholic pilgrims commemorating the death by hanging--

--of one-hundred martyrs during the sixteenth century. Their-- --crime was saying the Mass. On the-- --site of Tyburn near Marble Arch there is now a Convent.

Thousands of devout pilgrims kneel before the Crucifix, symbol of violent death for faith, as the Bishop of Brentwood pronounces the Benediction.

We do not hang our martyrs now.
