Eastbourne, Sussex, gives a signal welcome to His Majesty's ship "SUSSEX". The-- --ship has just returned from a period of service in the Mediterranean, and the South Coast town is the first English soil the officers and crew have set--

--foot upon for a long, long, time. The men have-- --not been paid off yet, and it's an official--

--visit of Sussex ship to Sussex County.

Eastbourne is the only town to be thus honoured, and the inhabitants have turned out in force to acknowledge--

--the high compliment. It is two-and-a-half years--

--since the bayonets of these--

--marines and blue jackets flashed back the brightness of--

--English sunshine. Lord Leonfield, Lord Lieutenant of Sussex, takes the-- --salute on the march-past. After H.M.--

--S. 'SUSSEX' is refitted, the Duke of Gloucester will sail in her for his tour--

--of Australia, but before that Jack's got a date !
