

PRINCE OF WALES.

BUSY DAY AT BRISTOL.

Picture.:- His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales enters--
--on another very busy day.

He arrives at Bristol to make an intensive tour of local--

--unemployment welfare centres. He inspects and chats with members of the British Legion,--

--and makes a special point--

--of cheering up invalid veterans who are--

--still unable to walk. Leaving University Hall Settlement, the Prince--

--visits the Liberty Lane Allotments. Here a number of--

--devoted unemployment workers meet the Prince, and like many others--

--feel amply repaid for their labour in the-- --cause. It is characteristic of the Prince that he insisted on "business as--

--usual" at all the centres during his tour. Before completing his exhaustive--

--round of a dozen or so calls, inspections, and what-nots, and being--

--cheered for hours and miles, the Prince visits--

--Bristol's fine Cathedral, where--

--he is received by the Dean, and leaves his royal signature--

--in the Cathedral's Book of Friends.

Thereafter more cheers from the gathered crowds,--

--and Bristol, honoured and happy, goes back to work.
