Picture:- This village of Ashopton is doomed.

Soon the only living things to walk these streets--
--will be fishes. And they will swim. The village--
--is to be submerged beneath five-thousand-- --million gallons of water. Derwent Village, also, will be-- --sunk with it. The whole district is to be-- --a Tom Tiddler's ground. A huge reservoir to supply--
--the wet needs of Sheffield, Derby, Nottingham, and Leicester.

That over-water bridge will soon be an under-water bridge.
More so--

--than this village is under the weather, The Austrian Tyrol has--

--had some snow. Even the hardened frost bitten--
--mountain dwellers think it's a--
--bit thick. Its immense weight has caused-- --roofs to cave in and alpine houses to-- --collapse. It's all very-- --well for winter-sports visitors, but it's not--
--sport for the inhabitants. Snow-ploughs force their weight through drifts--
--12-feet high, and take a week to cover--
--an hour's journey. Of course, snow as snow --
--is not too bad, but-- --it has a nasty habit of --
--thawing. In the Valley--
