GALE HAVOC.

HOUSE BLOWN DOWN.

Picture.

If anybody was ever born under a--
--lucky star, it's the nine--
--people who were sleeping in-- --this house when the whole wall collapsed. Not one of them received the slightest injury. The week-end gale ripped--
--off the front of the storeys and-- --nearly ripped the nighties off the sleepers when-- --they got up to see who--
--had burgled their wall and put the inside of-- --their house outside. Everything was upset. The gas-meter stopped--
--normal supplies, and escaped without a shilling.

The electric light failed from shock.

However, the front door remained carefully--
--shut, but a new housing problem was opened up.
