

2425141

WEDDING IN THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.

MISS DIANA CHAMBERLAIN BECOMES MRS. A. T. MAXWELL.

Picture.:- Sir Austen Chamberlain escorts his daughter Diane on the--

--day which is the never-to-be-forgotten--

--day of all days in a--

--girl's life. Miss Diane Chamberlain, with her father, moves--

--off in good order to the crypt of the--

--House of Commons, where the marriage--

--is to be celebrated. Lady Chamberlain, the bride's mother, awaits the-- --arrival of her--

--daughter in the crypt--

--entrance, and the bride herself enters to stand at the--

--altar to take--

--Mr. Terrence Maxwell--

--to be her lawful wedded husband and to have[&] to hold--

--and all the rest of it. Bidding her--

--favourite terrier an impulsive--

--farewell, the bride and bridegroom, looking exceedingly--

--beautiful, the bride I mean, and watched by Mr--

--Neville Chamberlain, return to Rutland--

--Gate, where the reception is to be--

2-25-41

(CONT).

--held. The bride's bouquet is orchids, the culture of which was--

--her grandfather, Sir Joseph Chamberlain's great hobby. All the M.P's of the Birmingham Division are guests--

--at the marriage reception,--

--and of course, her mother came too,--

--and her father.