

THE "QUEEN MARY".

CAMERAMAN VISITS THE GIANT LINER.

---

Picture.:- Here is the marvellous 'QUEEN--

--MARY' as she will be - - a scale model which itself has-- --cost five-thousand pounds. Every detail is here which will-- --eventually be here in the real thing. From this angle the mighty bows look as graceful and slight as a yacht's. For the last 20 weeks thousands of men have hammered and wrought, until NOW--

--she is almost internally complete. Her engine--

--rooms are ready to receive-- --the powerful turbines. Two-hundred thousand horse power will be--

--developed when these engines are driving--

--the ship. On the thousand-foot long decks the riveters--

--and welders are steadily completing work on making the colossal--

--steel shell impervious to strain or shock.

A super structure which looks as big--

--as the Albert Hall has already risen above the main--

--deck. From a distance, the black squad look like busy ants. More--

--so when they knock off and discharge down the gangway, in a dark--

--stream of greasy bobbing caps. But there's romance, as well as--

--dirt in the black squad. Just mark--

--how they say "OUR SHIP".
