Picture:- The Lamb and Flag Inn--

--near Ware, Cambridgeshire, has given up drink.

The proprietor and wife luckily escaped the--

--fire which destroyed the place. It's--

--another of those inns at which Dick Turpin called frequently.

As far as I can--

--see he did so much pub-crawling that holding up coaches must have been only his spare-time--

--job.

A race of Parisian waiters, all complete with tray and glasses of wine. They do--

--their balance act through Montmartre. Of course, they have no reason to--

--spill it now. There are no--

--necks handy to pour it down. The favourite is being passed. It's a--

--nose-to-nose fight on the tram rails, and the race is one by a bottle neck.

And what a prize - worth winning, and waiting for.
