DUKE AND DUCHESS OF KENT.

EDINBURGH'S WARM WELCOME.

---

Picture.:-

The Duke and Duchess of Kent arrive in Edinburgh to spend a busy nine days. The first of their--

--engagements is at the Usher Hall. Here His Royal Highness the Duke of Kent is to be made a Freeman of the Scottish Capital. He will therefore sign the roll of burgesses, which already includes the names of his three brothers.

After the ceremony, the Duke and Duchess are gracious--

--enough to pose for our camera, together with Lord Provost Sir William Thomson.

The next day they leave--

--the Palace of Holyroodhouse, their temporary residence to attend a service in St.Giles's Cathedral, and to open the General Assembly of--

--the Church of Scotland, over--

--which the Duke is--

--Lord High Commissioner. The Scots Greys are inspected--

--before Their Royal Highnesses--

--enter the Cathedral. To conclude on a woman's note, the Duchess's--

--cream coloured dress, severely cut brown coat, and hat with an eye veil, and her fox furs are greatly admired.
