ROYAL DRIVE to EAST LONDON

The Kings drive through East London. This is Commercial Road. It

----is becoming an oft-told----

----story, but perhaps its one which cannot be told too often.

The whole of these Jubilee demonstrations of affection to the Throns are building up into a sort of tremendous epic of loyalty and if anyone was----

----ever doubtful about His Majesty's East End welcome, it becomes my uty to tell that the----

Enders

--- East Enders reception had equalled, if not surpassed anything up to now. I have seen and heard nothing more whole-hearted. On arrival at Limehouse Town Hall, the King ----

--- and queen leave their carriage to receive the East London---

--Mayors, Mayoresses and Town Clerks. The weather has proved as re-remarkable as the demonstration-----

----This morning it was raining hard, but this afternoon, the-- ---sun shines brilliantly. King's ---- ---weather. If a good Providence does watch over us, it has certainly shown really royal favours to their Majesties drive--- amongst their people. So this is the Limehouse we've read----

--so much about. Well, at its heart, its just London, Britain, the Empire.
