

MIDDLEWEIGHT BOXING
CHAMPIONSHIP.
CONTESTANTS PREPARE.

Picture.:- There's a fighting spirit about. Al Burke heard about Petersen--

--and Neusel, so a barrage--

--has been arranged between Burke and McAvoy. Al Burke is--

--skipping and kicking around with glee at getting--

--a chance to see what he can do to the champ. The-- --contest for which he is preparing is the Middle-Weight of--

--Great Britain, and the Lonsdale Belt. His target McAvoy--

--is training in secret at Littleberough. UNIVERSAL'S cameraman is offered a soaking,--

--but remembers--

--the play called "What the Butler Saw". What our operator sees through the-- --keyhole is--

--just as sporting, but not--

--so liable to censorship. The coming fight at Belle Vue is--

--receiving champion McAvoy's active--

--consideration. And the operator at the keyhole--

--has been spotted. McAvoy's staff break all road records, but the champ relents--

--and decides to reserve his soaking for Mr. so-and-so Burke.
