

THE BIG FIGHT.
PETERSEN V NEUSEL.

Picture.:- Seventy-thousand people, I think, -- here

--have got wet/ to see Jack Petersen and Walter Neusel battle for the British Empire Heavyweight Championship.

Neusel carries the fight to Petersen, and lands some heavy body blows. Petersen retreats, but retaliates with telling punches.

He's putting all his strength behind his right, but-- --Neusel's weight tells, and Petersen is backed against the ropes, although he's landed a few quick upper-cuts to-- --the head. The pace is--

--killing for a heavyweight fight, but Petersen finishes up fresh at the end of the first round.

Neusel's extra weight gives--

--him a great-- --advantage. They're up again, meeting--

--in the ring centre. Petersen leads to the head, misses, and Neusel replies, and misses. Petersen swings, and Neusel ducks--

--out of danger. Both men are going--

--all out for a knock-out. They're clinching ! The referee separates them. Neusel leads with his left. Misses !
Petersen replies with a right swing. Misses ! I think-- --that round put Neusel--

--points up. Petersen's old eye wound has opened. That's a pity !

And Pa Petersen applies some lotion, or something, to the damage. Petersen--

--must be very conscious of that weak spot. And Neusel of course uses it--

--as a target. Neusel is getting home some damaging body blows, but Petersen makes a tremendous attack, and all but has-- 994- the German out. Both men have slowed up, and are-- --obviously nearly exhausted.

There goes the gong--

--for the 10th. Petersen's eye looks bad, and Pa Petersen wears an-- --anxious look. The Welshman is evidently in pain, and it's sheer grit which keeps him standing. Neusel has got him on the ropes, and is battering with all his weight. Petersen is practically--

--out on his feet. It's a knock-out for certain.
No, the gong has saved him. Petersen staggers to his corner, and Neusel is not in much better--

--case. The towel is in, and--

--Neusel is declared the victor--

--after an epic battle, making ring history.
