(a). Picture.:- The Army is very independent. If it wants a pier, where there isn't one,--

--the Royal Engineers are called in. The Sergeant-Major--

--waves his wand, says a few words in a language--

--well-known to the privates, and out of their box of tricks-- and a few gallons of perspiration, a pier is raised!--

--which will support--

--2½ tons for loading, or unloading purposes. This particular--

--piece of magic is performed by the R.E's in camp at Carlingnose. The canteen now being opened, they--

--call it a day.

(b). Picture.:- This fellow doesn't mind the heat. He's come--

--from the Gold Coast to take part in the Rifle Meeting--

--at Bisley. Marksmen and women --

--from all over-- --the world have entered for the various competitions making a record season's entry.
