(a). Picture:- The recent thunder storms flooded many streets and many towns. Acton High Road became a huge puddle, on--
--the shores of which--

--small boys guffawed lustily at passengers and drivers of passing motor-cars. The cars got over, but the joke didn't.

(b). Picture:- Trains are dryer and safer. In 1934, only one--
--passenger in 96--

--millions received fatal--

--injuries, in accidents. Only one--

--in every three-hundred-thousand received just injuries. A fine record for our railways. Risk about nil, and talking of--

--risks, Miss Elspeth Collins arrives--

--at St. Margaret's, Westminster. Miss Collins is marrying Lieutenant Ian Gwynne-Evans, R.N. Watching-- --maidens look forward with hope;--

--others look backwards and regret, as--

--the lovely bride enters--

--the Church. And at--

--three o'clock on a fine afternoon emerge Lieutenant and Mrs. Gwynne-Evans,--

--to whom all happiness and joy.
