(B). Picture:- BAVARIA - Children re-inact a local incident of the Thirty Years War. The Town of Dinkensbuhl was attacked by a ruthless enemy. The Force of men and arms was overwhelming. The burgers of the town were compelled to surrender, and in walked the invaders demanding money, or lives, as it were. Things looked vermillion, until somebody remembered that a heart of stone is sometimes softened by a little child. Bleeding villagers made no effect, so the children were put in the front line to deliver a tear and attack. Tears course down the ruthless enemy's cheeks, and the people were saved.
