THE KING IN SCOTLAND.

RECEPTION AT BALLATER.

---

Picture.:-

A guard-of-honour drawn from the Black Watch awaits the arrival at Ballater of His Majesty the King. The guard is under the command of Major Gilmour. Balmoral Castle, now set among the stretching miles of purple heather, is the King's destination. There he will take an annual holiday, and for a while try to forget the cares of state.

Wearing the Highland dress of Hunting Stuart tartan, with balmoral bonnet, His Majesty inspects the guard of honour. The King looks extremely well after his stay at Sandringham, and the bracing air of the Highlands will doubtless continue the good work.

His Majesty leaves Ballater for Balmoral by motor. Scottish cheers are sincere and whole-hearted, as ever they are.
