BRIEF.

(A). Picture.:- The new concrete bridge at Inverbervie, Scotland, should be a popular one. It enables the inhabitants of the district to save shoe-leather. Viscount Arbuthnot opens it to traffic, and tells us that it is Scotland's largest concrete bridge, is the work of three years, and is a feather in the caps of our bridge construction experts.

(B). Picture.:- A tale of destruction comes from Farnworth, Lancashire. Fire attacked a yarn factory, and damaged, or destroyed, seven-thousand bales of cotton. Many firemen had narrow escapes. Several were injured, but happily none very seriously.

It was only the excellent and fearless work of the firebrigades which prevented the flames devouring the entire street, but the fire has caused more temporary unemployment, which is too bad !
