

"CAMBRAI" REFOUGHT.

TANK CORPS EXERCISES.

Picture.:- The Tanks Corps Camp at Andover prepares for battle.

The Commanding Officer lets his staff into the secrets of his plan of attack, and the terrible tanks take attack to the Westward, and miss our cameramen by a quick jump from under. The Commander's plan is to show what might have happened at the Battle of Cambrai, if the tanks had been supported by sufficient infantry reserves. Just half a sec while I boh down !

That went over well !

Unoccupied members of the Corps watch the mimic action from a nearby hillock.

The machines are wonderfully efficient, (Hello ! Wrong queue !) and solve the hitherto knotty problem of taking gun fire right up to the enemy's first line. There's one thing certain. If there's another war, it should be a much better one than the last, with all these nice improvements ! (?)

A thing we are all glad to look forward to. And hope never to get a sight of !
