After 130 years of residence in Castlehill Barracks, Aberdeen, the Gay Gordons flit to a fresh home, the new Gordon Barracks at the Bridge of Don.

At their parade head was General Sir Iain Hamilton. The opening ceremony was performed by the Marquis of Huntley, who is by family connected with the gay Duchess who assisted in raising the Regiment by giving every recruit not only the King's shilling, but a kiss into the bargain.

Sir Iain and the Marquis inspect the troops. Later Sir Iain paid high-tribute to the Gordon Clans great record. The Marquis who is Chieftan of the Gordons than officially opens the Barracks and takes the salute as the Gay Gordons swing past. (EFFECTS).
