NEWS IN BRIEF.

(a).

Pictures.

About eighty years ago, a ship, the "Royal Charter" was wrecked on Anglesey, and four-hundred lives were lost. A memorial has just been erected to the unfortunate souls, on the spot where the ship struck in the gale. The unveiling is performed by Lord Boston, and the service to the long ago dead is sung. "They lost their lives, and have been given a stone."

A brighter subject is that of the opening of Derby's Industries' Exhibition by His Grace the Duke of Devonshire, in attire reminiscent of the Devonshire

Moors. His Grace, supported by the Lord Mayor and City officials of Derby, commends this example of the Council's initiative and progressiveness.

The exhibits deal only with the products of Derby itself, which include anything from a rail locomotive to a hair-pin.

No, hair-pins are obsolete. Well, hair-curler ! Anyway, it's a wonderful exhibition.
