

CAMPBELL BLACK'S BAD LUCK.

RECORD FLIGHT ATTEMPT FAILS.

Picture:-

Campbell Black, the aviator, has hit another bad luck and good luck patch. On his second attempt to create an England-to-the-Cape record, he has crashed. That's the bad luck part. The good-luck is that he escaped uninjured. Both he, and his co-pilot making successful descents by parachute. Florence Desmond, his wife, insisted that he took a parachute. He had never used one before, and at the last moment he agreed. The disaster occurred over the Sudan. The machine caught fire, and was destroyed. But part of Campbell Black's luck held - - he lives to fly another day.