(C). Esquire.-

The first commercial vessel to sail to London through the Arctic Circle, arrives from Vladivostok, and brings a polar bear to prove it. Unfortunately the poor bear broke its leg by falling down a hatchway. So it's not too good-tempered at the moment. Although 'bear', it's no nudist, because it's to be exhibited at the Zoo.

(D). Edinburgh confers the Freedom of the Scottish Capital upon Mrs. Andrew Carnegie.

Mrs. Carnegie, accompanied by her daughter, arrives at the City Chambers, where the ceremony is to be performed.

Mrs. Carnegie is, of course, the widow of the Scottish American multi millionaire, who was born in a weaver's tiny cottage in Dumfermline.

Lord-Provost Sir William Thomson, who presided, expressed his pleasure at the reciprocal civic honour given and secured by the City.
