UP FROM THE COUNTRY.

THE DAIRY SHOW.

Picture.:-

Lots of country visitors have come to town. Ladies of high pedigree occupy the stalls at the London Dairy Show, and bestow their bounty upon a thirsty people by way of the milk bucket. The hand still does some things better than machinery, but this show reveals that the machine age is fast getting its scientific claws into the farm. Dairy maids are not quite obsolete yet, but their retention may be a concession to the still necessary male staff for brides at village weddings, etc. Anyway, a dairy without dairy-maids would be like an egg without salt. Besides, butter requires patting with understanding. Machines could never do that!
