Leeds mixes the excitement, (if any) with a little gardening.

The Leeds Parks Department persuades the Lord Mayor, his Aldermen, and Councillors to plant, really plant I mean an avenue of trees through Woodhouse Moor. The Lord Mayor sets an example, and the rest follow. The saplings are sycamores, and here is Alderman Leigh,

Lord Mayor elect doing his bit of planting for posterity.

This is only part of a scheme to plant fifteen-thousand trees about the City. What about a holiday in the bracing forest of Leeds.
