

BLAZING SHIP SCUTTLED.AMAZING NIGHT PICTURES.

Picture.:- To save this ship from complete destruction, she is to be scuttled. It is a Greek vessel, of three-thousand tons, deck-loaded with Espato grass, now an inferno.

Safe removal of ten threatened timbered ships has just been achieved, after a scorching ordeal for those who save the ships. Electric drills are now cutting a hole in the doomed vessel's side to sink her. This drastic method is the only one which will prevent an explosion and subdue the flames which are a menace to the Liverpool river-side.

At last the drills have cut through her red-hot plates, and water is pumped into the hull. In pouring rain, our cameraman stood by all night to secure dawn pictures of the submerged, but still burning ship. The river is not deep enough to completely cover her, so our operator, like Casabianca, stood on the burning deck and turned his cine camera, as the ship went down. Heroic fire-fighting has averted a dock-side calamity.
