

14P141

(CONTINUED)

(C). Picture.

And so is this ! A British aeroplane crashed in Austria. The customs-officials insisted on outlaws of duty being paid for every day the foreign goods (that is the smashed 'plane) stayed in the country.

The owners went away, and did a little arithmetic sum, and came back to the wrecked 'plane with a box of matches. It was cheaper to burn the 'plane than stay to dismantel it and save the parts. The crash slightly injured the pilot and the wireless operator, but the bonfire hurt the owners a whole lot !

---