

MOTOR CYCLING CLASSIC.

THE SCOTT TRIAL.

Picture:- Ready to start on the most gruelling of all motor-cycle rough-riding events, the Scott Trial. 68

tryers over a terrible fifteen-miles course, which has to be covered three times.

The Moorland circuit at Wharfedale and Washburndale.
The heavy rains have made the going heavy. Did I say heavy? Well, it's not the best word I know to describe it, but I daren't use the other. Another rider profits by experience, and dodges the water splash.

But there's plenty more difficulties to beat. Plenty more bumps to make a fellow sore with the whole thing. Craggs is a famous spiller.

Kexbeck, another beauty spot by a babbling brook. Having passed

these, some of the competitors think they have done well until they reach this. Then they get really rattled. It's like riding up a soggy mountain-side. In fact it is riding up a soggy mountain-side. Well, not riding, but getting up anyway. Two or three man power are added to the horse power. And on he goes again! - - yes - - a little more push - - and on he goes again - - dash it! He's let me down. Well, if that's not his finish, it's mine!
