

DUKE AND DUCHESS OF YORK.

OPEN NEW BEXHILL PAVILION.

---

Picture.

Booming Bexhill, (booming I said as a compliment), has a wonderful day. In the second place the new one-hundred-thousand pound Municipal Entertainments Centre is being inaugurated, and in the first place the Duke and Duchess of York are doing the inauguration part. On arrival Their Royal Highnesses are greeted by Bexhill's Mayor Colonel Striedinger, and a lot of thousands of people packed in and around the new building. The De La Warr Entertainments

Pavilion is named after the Earl and Countess De La Warr, residents and benefactors of the town. The Duke inspects the guard of honour drawn from the British Legion

before the interior of the centre is inspected. It includes an open air sun parlour, theatre seating 1200 people, restaurant accommodating 200 diners, conference hall, library, tea-rooms balcony with a sea view, hot and cold, and all modern conveniences de luxe. Two first's for Bexhill, please, and, guard, you might lock the door
