IN MEMORIAM

GEORGE V.

19109-----1986

The Mation, the Empire, the whole world, mourns the passing of a great King.

The King is dead. His Most Excellent Majesty, George the Fifth, by the Grace of God, of Great Britain and Ireland, and of the British Dominions beyond the seas, King, Defender of the Faith, and Emperor of India, ruled for 25 and a half years.

Not only as ruler, but as soldier and sailor, he shared with his subjects much of that life which has now ended.

The Jubilee celebrations are still fresh in our minds. The affection and loyalty with which we held him, are yet fresh in our hearts. Teeming millions throughout the Empire mourn him as manly King and Kingly man. We mourn him as a father is mourned, but rejoice in his sons and daughters, worthily bred to carry on his illustrious line. With this regretted closing of a glorious reign, all Britons recognise that while other thrones have tottered and fallen.

the throne of Britain, supported as it is, by the will, loyalty and love of the people, stands as firm, if not more firmly than ever. Never in history, has a great King been eloser to his people, never has a great King been closer to his people, never has a great King endeared himself more to their hearts. Their welfare was his personal consideration, and his heart has been torn, his peace disturbed by the knowledge of unemployed distress. Make no mistake, their sufferings were shared by the King, and in his turn, his burden was made more supportable by the comfort of his queen, now a sorrowing widow mourning a loved husband.

But the British throne is never vacant. The King is Dead. Long Live the King. So runs inexorable life.

We therefore welcome King Edward the Eighth with a warmth tempered by sadness at the passing of his illustrious father. King Edward the Eighth, whom we have known and loved as the Prince of Wales.

IN HENGRIAM.

1910 1936.
The Nation, the Empire, the whole world, mourns the passing of a great King.

Picture: - The King is dead. His Most Excellent Majesty George V. bx the grace of God.

of Great Britain, Ireland, and the Dominions beyond the seas, King, Defender of the Faith, and Emperor of India, ruled for twenty-five and-a-half years, - not only as ruler, but as soldier and sailor, he shared with his subjects much of that life which has now ended. Their welfare was his personal consideration, and his heart was torn, his peace disturbed by their distress. Make no mistake, our sufferings were shared by the King. Now, we, his people, share his Queen's grief. But the British Throne is never vacant. The King is dead. Long Live the King. So runs inexerable life. With warmth, tempered by sadness, we therefore welcome as ruler him, whom we have known and loved as Prince of Wales - - King Edward VIII.

J-81121

Despite the national bereavement, industry demands that work shall go on; the King having already expressed this wish in the matter.

4000

in the last termination in the constant of the constant of the panded and the first plant out the last to be a little to be a lit there were to atrecte man a title that is Pietricie el Listoralar gour di