

PILGRIMAGE TO WINDSOR.
FLORAL TRIBUTES TO KING GEORGE.

Picture:- Sadness at Windsor Castle is invested with a sense of beauty by myriads of blooms. These floral tokens have come from all over the world - - from country cottage and from palatial dwelling. They range from a dozen bunched violets to rare blooms in striking design. One, which immediately catches the eye is a representation of Jock, the late King's favourite pony, sent by Hammersmith Traders. Another striking design comes from the Argentine Government. Coming nearer home, this tribute comes from Manchester. Scores of thousands of visitors have travelled far to see this profusion of bloom, and to read the many beautiful inscriptions, which, it is stated, are later to be gathered into a volume for Queen Mary.

..... This, the King's house at Burhill, Surrey, is almost finished. It was built by the Royal Warrant Holders Association as a Jubilee gift for presentation to his late Majesty. Work upon it is continuing, but no decision has yet been made concerning its future. For the moment, it's a a King's house without a King.
