(A) Picture.:- Twenty-one years ago the Dandy Ninth went overseas to fight in that Great War which was to end War !

The Royal Scots, otherwise the Dandy Ninth, march to St. Giles' Cathedral, Edinburgh, on a dull grey morning for their annual service, commemorating the Battalion's departure 21-years ago, from which journey so many did not return.

(B) Picture.:- In the Firth of Forth the beaching of a

Dutch steamer of seven-thousand tons for breaking-up commences. But a sudden gale takes her off her course, and she cannons into another ship already in the breakers' hands. As they are both for scrap heap, it doesn't matter much, anyway. The buying of old ships is a repercussion of the Government's defense plan. Steel works require more raw material. So, if you happen to have an old ship hoarded up, now's the time to sell it !
