THE "ARSENAL"

LORD LONSDALE NAMES NEW LOCOMOTIVE.

(EFFECTS)

A railway engine named after a famous football club - -"Arsenal". Lord Lonsdale, President of the Arsenal Club, comes to King's Cross to name the locomotive. Britain's sporting peer shakes hands with the driver and fireman, and surveys the world from the engine's cab window.

This engine is the first of fourteen which will receive the names of footer teams, but, of course, Arsenal is first! "Why of course?" yell thirteen other teams. Lord Lonsdale is not without cigar, but it's not yet lit!

The Arsenal team is here, too. Fans will probably pick out

Alex James, just behind Lord Lonsdale, as the unveiling takes place.

You will see him in a second or two. Meanwhile Lord Lonsdale has exposed the name-plate, together with the football device. Another rather famous figure present at the ceremony is George Allison. Probably keeping one eye on his team, and the other on the F.A. Cup!
