

BRITAIN'S WONDER SHIP.

VISITED BY THE KING.

---

Picture. The "Queen Mary", the many thousands who have worked upon her, and many other thousands welcome King

Edward. (EFFECTS)

The enormous multitude are just wild with enthusiasm.

(EFFECTS UNTIL KING TOUCHES GANGWAY)

After passing through dense cheering crowds to the gangway, His Majesty turns to the press of workers, and acknowledges their ovation. He is obviously very pleased by the reception. (EFFECTS)

The King inspects the bridge controls.

He is now talking to the ship's commander, Sir Edgar Britten. It is estimated that the King's tour will be seven miles in length. His Majesty is now leaving, and the crowds are again getting wildly enthusiastic. This Clydeside demonstration is wonderful. (EFFECTS)

The "Queen Mary's" siren is blown for the first time. (EFFECTS)

It is almost difficult for His Majesty to get to his car. The Black Squad are intent on getting his car, and they certainly are getting it. It's a real case of "my friend the King." Anyway, the King has amply demonstrated his side of that friendship. Most of the men are calling him "Teddy", and as he leaves they add "Good Bless you". And this big-hearted greasy capped men mean it.
