

NEWS IN BRIEF

(A) Picture.:- Glasgow holds its Stallion Show. Clydesdale stallions are, of course, famous the world over, and this Show is visited by many horse breeders from the colonies and foreign countries.

The gentlemen receive a careful toilet before entering the judging ring. As a part of the judging, each entry is required to show his paces. And here is "Dunmore Mark", owned by Mr. Samuel Young, of Balloch Farm. The Show winner is "Craigie Dalpeddar", sold for two-thousand-eight-hundred pounds. A bullion stallion.

(B) Picture.:- Owing to rain and snow, Fernilee Reservoir, Derbyshire, not yet finished, has already got an overflow of five million gallons of water per day. The Reservoir's capacity is eleven-hundred-million gallons. So a Sherlock Holmes isn't required to tell us that there's a lot of water around here. This basin-ful is the new supply for Stockport's water-works, and the over-flow is for anybody who favours floods.

Anyway, from the look of it, Stockport isn't likely to go dry for many a long bath night.

(C) Picture.:.) But Niagara Falls actually have gone dry.

This is the first time the Falls have been frozen over since the invention of motion pictures. The great test of nerves for Blondin and others who have crossed the Falls is now just a walk over. People will probably make it the boast of a lifetime. It's something you may never see again. Here, cry on my shoulder !
