

The great day is here. The "big guns" of soccer set their sights on Wembley. Among them, the Arsenal; their fans expecting more sharp-shooting from the Gunners. A cheer, too, for Aston Villa - those renowned cup-fighters - the pride of Birmingham fans, with six Final victories. (BRING UP)

A big job for little Jimmy Logie to skipper Arsenal; but Frank Moss wins the toss. So, to a roar from fifty thousand throats, the Arsenal kick-off - the third round battle is on. In last week's League rehearsal - Arsenal scored three quick goals. Here comes a repeat - an explosive shot by Roper, and the Gunners are on target. (BRING UP)

A first-minute goal for Arsenal; but Villa are hitting back. Kelsey makes a fine save. (BRING UP)

Arsenal again. Holton heads across to Milton - and that's No. Two. (BRING UP)

Holton put Arsenal three up in nine minutes. Then Villa took a turn - McParland bangs one home. (BRING UP)

Half-time - Arsenal leading three-one. And now we show these exclusive pictures of how the Londoners take that much-discussed refreshment - a whiff of oxygen. (BRING UP)

Out on the terraces, a fan takes his refreshment in solid form as the Villa set about repairing their battered fortunes. But the Gunner's opening salvo had won the day, and Logie lobbed in No. 4 (BRING UP)

Later, Don Roper added another. Arsenal won by five goals to one, to be rewarded by, yes, another home draw... (BRING UP)

Runaway Couple wed in Scotland

Prestonfield Edinburgh, is invaded by peggmen as it becomes the temporary home of the runaway lovers - Mr and Mrs James Goldsmith - after their quiet wedding at Kelso. All the world loves a lover they say, and the Press was there in such strength that even the peacocks took cover. (BRING UP)

20 year-old James Goldsmith is a director of seven French companies and his lovely eighteen year-old bride, the daughter of a millionaire Bolivian tin Magnate. Their whirlwind romance seems to have captured the imagination of the world. (BRING UP)

Then - the drive into Edinburgh for lunch with their Prestonfield host and hostess - Mr and Mrs Oliver.

And these pictures show how the ^{two} young people surrounded by well-wishers celebrate their newly-found joy - at the end of their "run-across-the-world" journey to happiness. (BRING UP)

At King's Cross, Mr G. Oldsmith and his bride, are again besieged by pressmen, and above the noise, answer questions on what they've been doing and their plans for the future.....

Scotland V France

Thirty-five thousand staunch supporters of Scottish Rugby saw France kick-off at Murrayfield - in the season's first home international...

And home hopes ran high as Scotland's new-look ^{pack} (there were five new caps) held its own in the opening minutes of the game... (BRING UP)

Yes, that heavyweight pack was launching all-out attacks that had their loyal fans roaring in support. (BRING UP)

And when Scotland had the chance to go in front, from a penalty, the kick only just failed. (BRING UP)

Yes, the Scots were holding their own in the set scrums and were more than dangerous in the loose; but it was their close-passing movements that frequently broke down... And like a flash, the quicksilver Frenchmen turned defence into lightning attack. (BRING UP)

One Scottish success was Weatherstone - a courageous winger, who all but crowned this glorious run with a Scottish try. (BRING UP)

So to the second half - with the home side mounting a furious offensive - with, on occasions, Kininmonth and Weatherstone gaining valuable ground by sheer determination. On men like these, Scotland must surely rebuild her fallen fortunes. (BRING UP) And, ironically enough, it was close-passing that brought France their winning try. Brejassou rounds off a joint effort to touch down. . So France won by three points to nil - but Scottish fans are looking hopefully to a brighter future. (BRING UP)
