

England -v- Wales Rugby.

The men of Wales invade Twickenham - content to let the printed word state their challenge to England's Rugby supremacy. And after beating the All-Blacks - it's no wonder that Wales are thinking of that Triple Crown as England - in white shirts - kick off. (BRING UP)

And within five minutes - those Welsh hopes seem well founded - as Olympic sprinter Ken Jones goes over - only to be called back. England fans breathe again. (BRING UP)

But Wales did score when Rowlands followed a kick ahead and was credited with a touch-down. (BRING UP)

Wales three points up; but England were fighting back - their younger forwards going great guns against the more experienced Welsh pack (BRING UP) And Twickenham's first all-ticket crowd were to see great Rugby - when England's back division went into action - and fifteen-stone giant Ted Woodward bull-dozed his way over (BRINGUP)

The second half - still three points . all. Penalty kicks going astray in the blustery wind. And during an inspired English onslaught - Woodward crossed for another try....

So it was England 6 - Wales 3 - until five minutes from no-side. Then Rowlands kicked the first goal of the match. Wales were level (BRING UP)

Then England made a last all-out onslaught. And a minute from time - Winn scored the winning try. England won by nine points to six - their first-post war victory over Wales at Twickenham (BRINGUP)
