

"ONCE MORE UNTO THE BEACH....."

With summer holidays just around the corner the cry is:
"Once more unto the beach, dear friends....." and ~~if you can believe~~ ^{if you can believe} ~~it~~ the latest swimsuit has a built-in girde. The reason for that must remain a secret to a mere man, who doesn't care if the swimming-pool is empty as long as the swimsuit is ~~filled~~/~~is~~ overflowing.

~~little individual~~

Next is a model with ^a peekaboo side-lacing, which is somewhat coily called "See Side."

It's a lucky thing they didn't think of this one while the bikini was ~~xxxx~~ in fashion. Well --- that's all for now, girls; but don't forget mother's motto: you can lead a man to the water, but he won't fall unless you push him.

While we're looking on the gloomy side, here's an idea that may come in handy, in places where ^{strong} swimmers wait until they're well out to sea before they find out the sea is even stronger. This was a demonstration, at Hamburg, of a new hand-operated rocket with ~~xxx~~ tow-rope attachment, which rescues the unlucky or the foolish, without endagging the lives of six other people.

And talking of strength --- here is twelve-year-old April Atkins in training at Santa Monica. She is said to be the strongest girl of her age in the world. Even if she isn't, she won't find many people to give her an argument.

To carry off three men and a woman you've got to use plenty of strength. It's sad to think that when she grows up Miss Atkins'll find out --- to carry off a husband you don't use your arms.
