

In Spain, the twenty-second International Fair was opened at Barcelona by the Minister of National Education. Thirteen nations from overseas, including Great Britain had sent samples of their industry --- in the cause of the sacred/ twentieth century ~~xxxxxxx~~ crusade, --- export of bust

SPORTS

At the White City Stadium in London, Oxford and Cambridge athletes, met their opposite numbers ~~xxxxxxx~~ from the American universities of Cornell and Pennsylvania; and Haines of Pennsylvania won the hundred yards. Duck soup! Here's the start of the mile.

This meeting gave victory to the visiting Americans by nine events to six --- although it was H. Boyd of Oxford who won the Mile. But you can't say much about this method of spending a Saturday afternoon --- except that it's a good job that Saturday night's bahn night.

PLAYING FIELDS EXHIBITION.

The Duke of Edinburgh, attended the Children's Playground Exhibition and Conference in connection with the Playing Fields Association --- and he made a speech in his customary forthright ~~xxxxxx~~ fashion.

Afterwards, His Royal Highness toured the exhibition, which shows what is being done to provide safe recreation, for children in towns.

PHARAOH'S SHIP.

In a Pyramid at Sakkara, about fifteen miles from Cairo, an Egyptian archaeologist has discovered the burial chamber of an ancient king of Egypt --- estimated to be nearly five thousand years old. It is claimed to contain the funeral ship, of one of the Pharaohs who lived hundred of years before Tutankhamen.

T.T. JUNIOR.

Lap records soon went overboard, when the streamlined motorcycles roared round the Isle of Man in the 1954 T.T. In the Junior, last year's winner, Ray Amm, seemed set for victory when he averaged 94.61 miles an hour. But here's No. 33 --- Rod Coleman. And when his rival went out with engine trouble --- Rod Coleman was the winner.
