

In Northern Spain, a contest in pouring out cider, is part of the celebration of a local saint's day; points are lost if any of the liquid is spilled; and the experts pour, in the way best-calculated to put a head on it. ^{11/6} In the case of a tie, uniformity of pouring decides the winner; and the best man with bottle and glass, receives the Cup. ^{6/2}

And here's a demonstration of how to pour out, so as to save more time for drinking. ^{4/6}

BAREFOOT WATER SKIER.

If anybody who's tried it thinks it's difficult to balance on a couple of water-skis --- see if it 's easier on one. It all ~~looks~~ ^{looks} easy, when you're as expert skilful as Chaflene Wellborn ~~of~~ ~~Florida~~ Florida. But easy or not --- when she gets up to forty miles an hour --- she does it without any skis at all; and that's impossible. ^{14/12}

AUSTRALIAN WRESTLING.

The tom-toms were throbbing when Chief War Cloud met Big Chief Little Wolf in a heavyweight contest at Sydney Stadium. ^{5/2} but ~~War Cloud~~ ^{Little} ~~Wolf~~ ^{is} Cloud is so tough he doesn't notice if he's hit with anything less than a totem pole. ^{4/6}

Then Little Wolf got tied up in the ropes ²⁻³⁸ and War Cloud did a war dance. ^{3/2} this had no effect so he tried to beat the tom-tom on his tum-tum. ^{3/5}

At the second attempt War Cloud went clean through the silver lining. ^{3/3}

By this time, even the ref. began to dislike ~~him~~ ^{both of them} ^{3/3}

Then Big Chief Little Wolf decided it was time for the worm to turn. He put on the Indian Death Lock and they all went onto a pow-wow. ~~Te-morrow~~ Te-morrow rub wooden heads together --- make fire. ^{10/2}
