

At the end of the Royal holiday in Scotland, Her Majesty the Queen was received by General Sir Gordon Macmillan --- who, ~~is~~ is Colonel of the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders ~~5~~ --- when she went to Stirling, to inspect that famous Scottish regiment. This parade was a centenary celebration of the Battle of Balaclava, in which the regiment's forefathers won the first, immortal use of that famous phrase ; "The Thin Red Line".

Next --- at Stirling Castle --- the keys were surrendered to ~~Her Majesty~~ the Queen.

And the day of ceremony, ended with the traditional Retreat.

Also in Scotland --- the Duke of Edinburgh opened a new laboratory for electronics. ~~During~~ ^{During} his tour of inspection, the Duke stressed the new importance of electronics not only for defence, but for the building up of our industrial power for peace.

in which research engineers are to be trained, for work with Scottish firms. This ~~a first step in the development of~~
~~with Government, etc.~~