At Plymouth --- a demonstration of the latest methods of rescuing airmen who have been ferced down in the sea. This vital work is done by what is now known as the Marine Branch of the R.A.F. --- ce-ordinating two rescuing arms, on the sea and above it. In the Second World War, air-sea rescue saved many thousands of lives; and in peacetime their work extends to cover such errands of mercy, as the evacuation of refugees from earthquakes.

CHICAGO STORM.

From Chicage --- comes the news story of the heatiest rainsterm in all that city's recorded history. Eighteen people died in traffic accidents, in the terrential non-stop downpour; and the damage was estimated at len midlion dellars.

HONDURAS FLOODS.

And from Honduras, in Central America --- villagers mareoned on top of a hut were survivors in the worst floods they had known for a quarter of a century.

BUS AND DOCK STRIKE.

Buses standing idle in the depots were the outward and visible at sign of the bus strike in Lendon that started quietly and spread rapidly; while many Lendoners had to get to work on their feet. The familiar bridges and squares of the capital presented an unfamiliar aspect in the absence of the makaking mainstay of surface transport; and hour by hour, bigger and bigger crowds sought the alternative routes below the strface.

In the London Docks, at the same time, shipping was at a standstill as a result of the dispute involving many thousands of dockers and stevederes.
