DIAMONDS. 29/10/54.

This is one of the finest of the world's collections of diamonds --- in the office of Mr Harry Winston ~~xx~~ in New York. Now from the cutter's wheel, comes a super-diamond worth a half a million dollars. A nice present for any girl. But looking facts in the face, very few girls will ever meet a man with a half a million dollars; you're lucky if you meet a half a million men with a dollar.

BIBLE EXHIBITION.

At the British Museum in London, an archaeological exhibition "[redacted]" was opened by Lord Samuel.

The treasures on show in this exhibition --- mostly from the Holy Land [redacted] --- have been recovered as the result of many years of patient ~~xxxxxxxxxxx~~excavation. They are objects which were in use in the times recorded in the Holy Bible. Some of them are several thousand years old. A bronze oil lamp from a town of the Old Testament, and a necklace that may have adorned the neck of a Princess of the Canaanites, are to be seen among the many priceless relics.

BOXERS TRAIN.

From the world of the big fights; training in London, is former middleweight-champion, Albert Finch. Now out of the ranks of the middleweights --- he is preparing to have a ~~gà~~ at the title for light-heavies. The man to meet Albert, is title-holder Alex Buxton. He, too, is training in London --- in the Old Kent Road. As an essential part of working-up --- Alex is making life tough on a punch-bag.

FREEDOM BALLOONS.

At a secret location in Germany, near the borders of Czechoslovakia, workers of an organisation known as the Crusade for Freedom, send up messages into the sky carried by ~~xxx~~ balloons of all shapes and sizes. The prevailing wind, carries them into the satellite countries behind the Iron Curtain. On the other side, the printed word is released --- designed to speed the freedom of Central and Eastern Europe.

TRIESTE EVACUATED.