

FLOODS.

16/11/54.

Heavy rains and high tides have already been causing severe floods in many parts of Britain. At Creetown, in the southwest of Scotland, every available hand was turned to the task of checking the overflowing waters of the Balloch Burn --- choked by tons of gravel washed down into it from nearby banks. It was the second flooding in the village in two weeks. ~~X~~

At Hull, ~~the Minister of Housing and Local Government~~, Mr Duncan Sandys, had flown from London to obtain first-hand ~~knowledge~~ knowledge, of floods estimated to have caused damage in more than a thousand homes. ~~/~~

And at Ipswich --- it was more a case of impending disaster than actual damage. Watch was kept on the harbour, where the waters at high tide, rose to within inches of the danger-level. ~~/~~
