

They chose a dark night for this newest test of atomic explosion at Yucca Flats, Nevada.

And the flash was seen five hundred miles away.

ATOMIC SURVIVORS.

And here at London Airport is an echo of the atom bombs which were dropped on Nagasaki and Hiroshima in the Second World War. They are Japanese survivors from those cities. They are in Britain to lecture on what happened ⁱⁿ ~~when~~ these two explosions ^{that} ended the war.

ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY.

A new Assembly Hall is being built for the King's School at Canterbury, in the precincts of the ancient Cathedral. And, appropriately, the foundation stone was laid by the Archbishop of Canterbury, Dr Fisher.

So the mid-twentieth century adds its contribution, to these buildings which have figured so largely in the pages of our history.

DUKE OF EDINBURGH.

The Royal Yacht Britannia in the harbour at Villefranche. And the Duke of Edinburgh comes to the quayside of this little ~~Mediterranean~~ Mediterranean resort, accompanied by the Prefect of the Alpes Maritimes and escorted by police in ceremonial uniforms. The Duke was going aboard Britannia, to take part in the exercises of the Combined Fleet.

INTERNATIONAL MOTORCROSS.

At Montreuil in France --- what the enthusiasts call a motorcross; an international motor cycle cross-country scramble, with entries from Britain, Belgium and France. The hard going made for high speeds; and the high speeds made for hard going.

First heat winner --- and winner of the final, was Leloup of Belgium.

FIRE AT BIRMINGHAM.

Damage estimated at ^{nearly} a million pounds was caused by this fierce outbreak of fire in a huge business block in Birmingham. The building stood right opposite the fire station --- but brigades had to be called from many neighbouring towns. Fortunately, the block was empty when the fire started.
